The estate is located near to the historical centre of Neive, known as 'the town of the four docs', thanks to the best crus of Nebbiolo (Barberesco), Barbera, Dolcetto and Moscato d'Asti.

The Lequio family started to grow wines on this soil since 1850 and expanded its properties also into the Barolo, Roero and Gavi di Gavi areas in order to possess a complete selection of these fine piedmontese wines. Today the three sisters (Rosanna, Daniela and Antonella) with the help of their husbands and four employees continue this oenological tradition. The wines from the region are no less famous and include a wide range of Chianti as well as Brunello di Montalcino and Vernaccia di San Gimignano. The controlled production of Chianti, Tuscany's world-renowned wine, dates back to 1716 when the Grand Duke of Tuscany established the boundaries of the production area, (the 70000 hectares between Florence and Sienna) in a legal document. Chianti has a D.O.C. G rating: the highest distinction achievable for an Italian wine.

Luiano is an ancient fort, whose origins lie in the late middle ages, and whose land spans 40 hectares in the northern region of the Chianti Classico. Throughout history Luiano has been home to many of the famous families that made Florence a world celebrated city and established the essence of what it is to be Florentine. During the 1950's Luiano's prestigious past joined forces with the passion of the Palombo Family who brought with it ambitious plans for the firm's future. Cloth and textile merchants for several generations, the Palombo Family decided to abandon their old profession to dedicate itself to the fascinating art of winemaking.
